SELEX Galileo's HALO Acoustic Weapon Locating System to Enter Service with the Spanish Army

---

SELEX Galileo, a Finmeccanica company, and INDRA of Spain are delighted to announce that the SELEX Galileo HALO Weapon Locating System is due to enter service with the Spanish Army early in 2009.

The HALO system has undergone an in depth investigation and was chosen by the Spanish Army at the end of an extensive competitive tendering process. HALO is already in operational service with the UK, US and Canadian Armed Forces and Spain will be the fourth user to deploy the system in support of their troops currently deployed on coalition operations. This purchase brings the total number of countries that have HALO in service to six with more in the pipeline.

SELEX Galileo's HALO system is the acknowledged as the 'World Leader' in the acoustic weapon locating forum and remains the equipment of choice for serious contenders in the business of acoustic weapon locating. The teaming with INDRA is likely to lead to further sales of the system around the world.

Delivery of the first system was completed in 2008. This has given the Spanish Armed Forces a Full Operating Capability and basis on which to build and deploy further systems. Training will be conducted by INDRA in Spain for the troops that will deploy with the system. INDRA will also be integrating the system into the Spanish Armed Forces' Vehicles and Shelters and conducting other system integration work.

HALO will be on display at the Aero India Exhibition in Bangalore, India on the Alpha Design Technologies stand, Hall 'B', Stall No. 29.
